Techniques, Tips, & Prep Options

TECHNIQUES	Puree, Mashed Items and Glycemic Index Combining items into a mash or puree can improve nutritional content and temper the glycemic index of a dish. Mashed cauliflower and potato has a more diverse and enhanced nutritional composition than plain mashed potatoes and has a much lower Glycemic index.
WEEKLY TIP	Avoiding a Spike in Your Blood Sugar or “Food Coma”... Assess the whole meal. If one item has a high glycemic, choose a smaller portion size and add fat and soluble fiber to the meal. Fat and fiber slow the uptake of simple carbs. Also consider your activity level. Simple carbs are great prior to a workout but not so much before watching TV. We don’t want you to be afraid of foods, just learn how your body reacts and adjust.
NEW INGREDIENTS	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Red Cabbage, Shallots, Shiitake Mushrooms & Jicama, • Grape seed oil
HOW TO USE OUR PRODUCTS	Soul Salt - Use anytime a recipe calls for salt. Great for adding flavor while not over salting. Umami Tsunami - Adds Umami, the elusive “Savory” taste, to any dish. Great for soups, vegetables, meat dishes, casseroles, and grilled or pan fried items. Stocked and Loaded - Use when a recipe calls for stock. Mix 1 Tbsp per 6 oz water. It can also be sprinkled into any dish as added flavor and to get the health benefits of bone broth. A little bone broth every day helps so much with GI health! F-Bomb - A healthy thickener for any dish or soup. Why use cornstarch or flour when you can add a multi strain prebiotic?! King Tut’s Nuts & Spice Blend (Dukkha) - The ultimate topping for any dish that needs a crunch or that “something” to make it interesting.
